Online directories

Online directories are websites that list people or organisations.

Some local authorities provide online directories of organisations that provide support and activities for people with learning disabilities.

Directories like these often include summaries of the organisations, explaining what activities and support they can offer.

They will also provide contact details for each organisation, such as an address, phone number and a link to their website if they have one.

Organisations might be presented in alphabetical order, or they may be arranged by type of service or by region.

You might be able to do a search within the directory.

Organisations should check that they are included in any local directory and ensure that their information is up to date.
